The Hudson Valley Ebony Strings

A chamber orchestra comprised of young and talented African American string players who have a pure love for music. The founder of this group is E'lissa Jones, a violinist and singer-songwriter, who is also an original member of the Colorado Ebony Strings Quartet. The mission of this group is to play concerts in the area aimed to inspire other young African American students to embark upon a stringed instrument and passionately play music together. With a strong classical background, students can branch out and play other styles of music effortlessly, which this group will do as well. You are officially invited to be a part of the first African American string chamber group in the Hudson Valley. Submit your free application and audition mp3 today! Please send submissions and inquiries to ejbmusic7@gmail.com.
